Dear Mr. Sigler,

I'm glad to know that Louise Jones, who I knew only as "L.A." from the time we first met, is OK. I'd heard years ago that they broke up, that Penn had left Midlothian, and I have no current address for him. If you write LA, please remember me to her.

I enclose a list of the books, all except Oswald in New Orleans, which I did not print.

You will find that they are not at all like Penn's.

No theories, conjectures, only fact and almost all of that from official sources yet proving that the official "solution" was false and intended to be.

It may amuse you to know that LA used to make a joke out of saying about me that I never saw her except when she was in bed. I have a clear recollection of the first time but not later occasions. It was the first time I'd met either of them.

I'd done a very successful TV show in New York's Channel 5. This led them to do a panel show later edited and aired, syndicated, too, as "The Minority Report." When it was over Penn took me to their hotel room. Sure enough LA was in bed, asleep, I think, until she heard us enter.

Sincerely,

Harold
